What: Join us for an engaging and insightful panel discussion, "Why Study Art History at University?", designed for young adults and teenagers eager to explore the fascinating world of Art History

Where: zoom (booking below)

When: 16th September 2024 6.00 – 7.30pm

Schedule for the Event

Short talk by Taymoor Atighetchi

Taymoor studied History of Art at the University of Cambridge. He is currently CEO of Papier and attributes much of his success to his background in art history and visual culture. He will be speaking about his experiences at university and their subsequent impact on his career.

Short talk by Toby Monk

Toby Monk is a director at Christie's, overseeing Global Recruitment and Engagement. He sits on the global committee for Equality Diversity & Inclusion and chairs the Corporate Social Responsibility committee for EMEA. He will be speaking on the long term career benefits of a degree in Art History from the perspective of one of the industry's top employers.

Panel discussion with Art History Link-Up Alumni

A panel of 8 Art History Link-Up alumni who are studying the subject at seven different universities across the UK, will share their experiences of Art History and the transformative power of the subject.

There will be a Q&A after.
